Summary: Sesshomaru has always admired Kagome. The way she told stories. The way she cared for her brothers. When he finally meets her, he asks her to come to Neverland with him. She accepts and brings her brothers. What kind of crazy adventures can they experience in the enchanting world of Neverland? Will Sesshomaru fall for Kagome? Will they run into the notorious Naraku? Enjoy :)

Lost boys

I own nothing. This is based on a Peter Pan story. But it is the Inuyasha characters. The names below let you know who is who. Enjoy :)

>Kagome never believed in fairy tails. Though she had heard many in her childhood. Her mother still told stories to Shippo. He was seven. He was also the youngest of them. She has two brothers.

Her mother stopped telling her stories when she was ten.

But it didn't mean that her and her younger brother Souta stopped listening to them.

Souta was twelve.

Her mother had always told her at the end of every bedtime story that anything was possible.

But she never believed her mother until this night.

Her mother was asleep. She had just got done telling Shippo his story. It was 'The Jungle Book'.

Her and her brothers just fell asleep.

Sesshomaru looked in the window. Luckily it was unlocked. He quietly opened the window.

A boy the age of sixteen flew into the sibling's room.

He always came to this house to hear the older woman's stories. Not only for himself. But for Rin too. Rin was a young fairy. she enjoyed the stories very much.

He had even heard the young girl tell a few stories. They were amazing.

Even if he was older. He was still interested.

Rin, a fairy that was the size of his palm was flying beside his head.

"You must be quiet Rin. We can't wake them." Sesshomaru whispered as he placed his first finger over his mouth.

Rin nodded in agreement. Sesshomaru quietly shut the window behind him. He landed on the ground silently.

He looked at the toys near the young boy's bed. He was the youngest, that much he knew.

The second oldest looked about twelve or thirteen.

Then there was the girl.

She was so beautiful. She was the oldest, obviously his age.

He took a step toward her sleeping form. He stepped on the tv remote. He didn't even see it there. He only saw the girl.

The tv was cut on.

Sesshomaru's eyes widened. He jumped up. He was against the ceiling in a shaded part, in an instant. Rin was on his shoulder. She tried to hide behind him some to hide her glow.

Kagome shot up. She looked at the tv and she jumped up to turn it off. She couldn't have Shippo or Souta waking up.

She wasn't sure why it turned on. But it didn't matter.

She turned around to go back to bed. She saw something on the ceiling. She turned and saw a floating boy and something glowing on his shoulder.

She was about to scream when Sesshomaru quickly flew to her. He clasped his hand over her mouth as he hovered in the air.

"I won't harm you. Please don't scream." Sesshomaru said.

Kagome nodded.

Sesshomaru landed on the ground as he pulled his hand back.

"I am sorry i woke you." He said.

"It's okay. Who are you?" Kagome asked.

Sesshomaru smiled.

"Sesshomaru," He said.

"How do you fly?" Kagome whispered the question.

"I believe your mother told you and your brothers a story of a boy named Peter Pan." Sesshomaru said.

"What about it?" Kagome asked. She looked at his amber eyes.

"I figured that was a good enough answer." He said.

She looked at the fairy.

"What do you mean?" Kagome said. She was suspicious.

"Neverland is real." Sesshomaru said.

She looked at the sword on his hip.

"Will you allow me to show you?" He asked as he extended his hand towards her.

Kagome took a step back.

"I can't leave my brothers." She said.

Sesshomaru gave a small smile.

"They can come too. We can fly there." Sesshomaru said.

Kagome gave a smile.

She turned and ran to Souta.

"Wake up!" Kagome said excitedly as she shook her brother. Souta shot up.

He looked at Sesshomaru and froze.

Kagome ran to Shippo's bed.

"Wake up Shippo!" Kagome said.

Shippo rubbed his eyes. He sat up.

Both boys looked at Sesshomaru.

"Who are you?" Shippo asked.

Sesshomaru smirked.

He started floating as he rose higher and higher until his hand touched the ceiling.

'He's like Peter Pan.' Shippo thought.

Both boys jumped out of their beds. They stood next to Kagome.

"How are you flying?" Souta asked.

"He has a fairy!" Shippo said.

Sesshomaru looked at Rin who was beside his left pointed ear.

"This is Rin. I have asked your sister to accompany me to neverland. She asked that you both come along. I accepted." Sesshomaru said.

Souta and Shippo's mouths were agape.

"Neverland?!" They both asked at the same time.

A/N: Here's my new story. Let me know if i should continue. Please review :)
